Earlier this year, USGBC launched the Demand Response LEED Pilot Credit as a road test before full adoption in LEED 2012. We are now working on ways to engage even more projects, drive widespread adoption of demand response participation, and develop a stronger relationship between the energy & building communities.

To learn more about the demand response pilot credit, explore becoming a partner in the new market pilot, and receive a report on qualified demand response programs in your market come see us at this year's Greenbuild conference in the LEED Lounge or join us for a focused information session. Members of the team that developed the credit language will be available to answer your questions and help you discover how your projects can benefit.
