

Friday Roundup: Calling All Sports Fans, Scholars, Animal Lovers, and Speed-Walkers

Published on 14 Sep 2012

Written by Jessie Andrews

Posted in Industry

Photo credit Harvard Green Building Services

We've got your weekly dose of green goodness below, and this week's lineup shows that pro athletes, scholars – even sea otters – are going green! Sit back, relax, and enjoy the roundup.

- Harvard's Green Walls filter out air pollutants in its Psychology building (aiming for LEED Gold!). Talk about a breath of fresh air!
- Need another animal fix after last week's seal pup? We've got you covered. Check out why sea otters are "global warming warriors," Mother Nature Network.
- Walk on, Washingtonians: DC takes gold as a Walk Friendly Community.
- More evidence that going green pays off: green work policies increase productivity.
- There are 15 LEED-certified pro sports venues in North America, and this "Game Changer" report from our friends at Natural Resources Defense Council says that there's more green to come.
- USGBC's Community Green supports community colleges.

What's your favorite green link of the week? Did we miss anything? Speak up! Leave a comment and let us know what you think.

Jessie Andrews
Marketing and Communications Summer Associate

0 comments

Leave a comment

Leave a comment Don't have an account? Create one

You must be signed in to leave a comment.

Email

Password

SIGN IN