There are two upcoming webcasts that will be useful for campus stakeholders and advocates interested in green building and green schools. The first discusses implementing LEED in a campus setting, and the second focuses on high building performance on campuses. Below is more information, so be sure to sign up!

LEED Implementation Strategies on a Campus: Utilizing the 2010 Application Guide for Multiple Buildings & On-Campus Building Projects

December 2, 2011, 2 p.m. EST

Working on LEED implementation in a campus setting? Interested in streamlining documentation efforts for multiple buildings? USGBC LEED team member Melissa Gallagher Rogers will present the revisions to the Application Guide for Multiple Buildings & On-Campus Building Projects, discuss strategies for minimizing documentation for campus buildings and review opportunities for implementing LEED strategies at a campus scale. If you are working on multiple LEED projects on a shared site this presentation is not to be missed. To download the revised guidance please visit usgbc.org/campusguidance.

Establishing a Culture of Performance on your Campus

Thursday, December 15, 2 p.m. EST

In an effort to reduce carbon emissions and provide more enriching learning environments for their students, institutions of higher education have prioritized the measurement & enhancement of building performance. USGBC is tackling this issue head on in its performance based rating system LEED for Existing Buildings: Operations & Maintenance. Learn how this rating system can support the improvement of existing facilities and infrastructure on your campus and the strategies for scaling the effort from a building level to a campus wide approach. The webcast will review the LEED for Existing Buildings: O&M process and discuss the supporting guidance created specifically for campus implementation efforts. This webcast is the last in a four part series created specifically for higher education institutions. Previous webcasts may be viewed here. To register please use this link
