

Friday Roundup: LEED at National Zoo, Sustainable Building and Soufflés

Published on 7 Sep 2012

Written by Jennifer Easton

Posted in Industry

Twitter Facebook LinkedIn

Photo credit: Smithsonian National Zoological Park

This week's green building articles went far beyond bricks and mortar: The sea lion in our header image should be ample indication. Check out our sampling of sustainability reads, videos and photos below.

Did we miss anything? Share your favorite links from the week in the comments.

- Why green building is like making a soufflé Forbes. No eggs required.
- Video: The Crash Pad, world's first LEED Platinum hostel.
- LEED at the Zoo: The National Zoo's American Trail is marrying sustainability and adorable seal pups. What's not to love?
- In DNC bloggers' HQ, the story of American Innovation Writ Small Fast Company. LEED-certified Packard Place in uptown Charlotte was HQ for Politico staff during the Democratic National Convention.
- Rural Oregon Town Hit by Floods Builds Back LEED Earth Techling

Related Articles

Five ways data is driving green performance

By Scot Horst

IN INDUSTRY

06.13.17

USGBC partners with Dalian Wanda Commercial Properties in China

By Joseph Crea

IN INDUSTRY

06.9.17

USGBC takes part in roundtable on LEED and Industrial Facilities in Belg...

By Joseph Crea

IN INDUSTRY

06.8.17

USGBC Articles can be accessed in the USGBC app for iOS or Android on your iPhone, iPad or Android device.

