

Creating a triple bottom line: Green development + social purpose + positive returns

Published on 21 Jun 2013

Written by Jeffrey S. Lesk

Posted in Industry

While sustainable development is important in its own right, and doubly effective when implemented in ways that improve the financial bottom line for owners, the Greenbuild Affordable Housing Summit will take you even further — showing you how green development can be the driver for “Triple Bottom Line” projects.

USGBC again has joined forces with Enterprise and IPED — two powerhouses in the world of affordable housing and community development. This year, the summit will take place from Nov. 19-20, at the 2013 Greenbuild International Conference and Expo in Philadelphia.

We’ve pulled together the nation’s foremost authorities, practitioners and educators in the field to teach you how to reach a deeper shade of green, find and utilize financial tools, and achieve the best, most progressive green affordable housing and community development projects on a cost-effective basis.

We’ve also focused on finding presenters who lead by example and teach from experience — those who can encourage developers, owners and others to take the first step and then move to deeper levels of sustainability. At the summit we will also introduce projects that continue to move the needle, sometimes through achieving greater scale, sometimes through creating innovative financing structures and sometimes applying cutting-edge design to some of the most challenging projects.

But our most important focus is the people side of sustainability. We’re trying to do our part to transform the face of affordable housing and community development, which has become a significant force in the national sustainability movement. We are striving to remind people that sustainability isn’t complete unless we address both natural and human resources.

At our two-day summit, we welcome newcomers and experienced participants to join together to learn, contribute and share experiences in combining green development, positive economic returns and social purpose. We look forward to seeing you there!

Related Articles

2018 Super Bowl to be held in LEED Gold U.S. Bank Stadium

By Sheri Brezinka

IN INDUSTRY

02.1.18

The GBCI rating systems explained

By Sarah Stanley

IN INDUSTRY

01.2.18

Top 10 searches on usgbc.org in 2017

By Heather Benjamin

IN INDUSTRY

12.21.17

