“Membership at USGBC is important to us because it represents a commitment to making our buildings and workplaces more efficient and healthier places to work and to do business.” - Alex Liftman, Global Environmental Executive, Bank of America

Bank of America Corporation (BAC) is one of the world's largest financial institutions, serving individual consumers, small- and middle-market businesses and large corporations with a full range of banking, investing, asset management and other financial and risk management products and services. BAC is among the world's leading wealth management companies and is a global leader in corporate and investment banking and trading across a broad range of asset classes, serving corporations, governments, institutions and individuals around the world.

Headquartered in Charlotte, N.C., BAC operates in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and more than 40 other countries worldwide, occupying more than 8,500 buildings globally with more than 267,000 employees.

A member of USGBC since 1997, BAC is proud to have been one of the first companies to make green building and LEED a priority across its corporate footprint. Bank of America is on track to reach its goal of LEED certification in 20 percent of occupied workspace by 2015. It has successfully integrated LEED certification into the design, construction and operation of all types of properties, including banking centers and office buildings.

Demonstrating its commitment to sustainability, in April 2013, BAC announced it exceeded its original 10-year, $20 billion environmental business initiative — more than four years ahead of schedule — delivering more than $21.6 billion in lending, equipment and carbon finance, capital markets and advisory activities to clients around the world. In 2013 the company embarked on a new 10-year, $50 billion environmental business initiative, bringing the company's total goal to $70 billion over the course of 16 years — the largest of any financial institution.
